Consider closer integration with CA Tobacco Control Section with a clear vision to prevent youth marijuana use (i.e. effective media campaigns - not the 'marijuana is great as long as you don't drive' PSA developed by OTS, proven policies to reduce youth access, adequate taxes, enforcement, advertising restrictions, etc.) Acknowledge the cannabis industry is like the tobacco and alcohol industry - they want to recruit new users, and their priority is profit, not public health. Anyone with financial interests in the industry should not be involved in rule making.

Our state "PUBLIC HEALTH" agency CANNOT feign that it is a protector of public health when it is now in bed with an industry dedicated to selling and distributing a potentially harmful and addictive drug. Your "Objective Goal of these proposed regulations is to implement the Department's responsibility under the Act to protect public health and safety through the licensing of cannabis product manufacturers, the establishment of safety standards for cannabis products, and the establishment of minimum standards for packaging and labeling of cannabis products WHAT A BUNCH OF DOUBLE SPEAK! What if we allowed a system of opioid recommending physicians who, without benefit of any existing relationship with a patient, provided them with a recommendation based on the patient's self-diagnosis? You are hypocrites who should simply shut down your worthless agency.

Like Big Tobacco of yesteryear, Big Marijuana knows that it needs lifelong addicted customers to prosper. Addictive industries generate the lion's share of their profits from addicts, not casual users. This means that creating addicts is the central goal. And — as every good tobacco executive knows (but won't tell you) — this, in turn, means targeting the young. Please don't let Big Pot dominate the discussion, let's put public health of our young people before Big Pot's profits and motives. Big Pot has the funds and influence to protect their interests, our kids don't have the same protections against pot promoters.

Thank you for your time.

Even though there are attempts to safeguard the public from contaminated Products, it doesn't go far enough. I have spent alot of time in dispensaries and found the amount of product being purchased from small time growers is huge. The current regulation will not curb this practice. I have a mobile testing unit. I think with the right approach this could be the way to enforce testing. Due to the strangulation of requirements most dispensaries will only buy a few products to stay legal but will continue to sell uncontrolled, possibly dirty products. There must be an option on the street level to protect the public.

MJ is marketed as a medication, when it is not. There are not sufficient studies on its effects on specific diseases/conditions or interactions with other medications, there are no uniform standards, dosage, potency, quality assurance, or handling protocols. It's not FDA approved and is a known carcinogen, listed on CA's Prop 65. THC levels are extremely high in many products, making it more likely to cause addiction. Marijuana is demonstrated to harm brain development in youth under 26. It increases the likelihood of psychotic episodes. And numerous tests have shown that CA pot is contaminated with pesticides.

To Whom It May Concern,

With the State's legalization of adult-use cannabis, numerous ancillary industries have arisen in response to new and pending regulations. I've recognized there is a lack of consideration for cannabis waste in particular. This is a concern of mine due to the increasing number of cultivation, manufacturing and retailer licenses being granted within the state without identified guidelines and/or regulations regarding safe disposal of cannabis byproduct and cannabis waste.

Cannabis waste is expansive and differs from cultivators, manufacturers, and retailers. As such, it would also be prudent to clarify streams of waste by industry vertical. For example, cannabis waste runs the gamut of post-extracted cannabis plants and flowers, failed lab tested materials, ancillary manufactured waste (for example, i.e., wax paper, gloves, beakers, etc.), retail display items, and returned/damaged retail items, and more. Currently, certain streams of cannabis waste are frequently mistaken with safe-to-consume products, posing a risk to children and disenfranchised individuals.

It is my recommendation that regulations reflect who is qualified to handle cannabis waste. A licensed cannabis waste handler ought to be contracted for each cannabis cultivator, manufacturer, and retail site to combat the negative repercussions cannabis waste has on human and environmental health. The inclusion of such a standard will complete the symbiotic relationship between key stakeholders—the environment, the public and the industry.

Allowing retailers to offering free medical cannabis samples to patient will aid patients in deciding the correct cannabis therapy for their condition. Allowing nonprofits to operate harm reduction services and compassion programs can drastically improve the social welfare of Californian's. Our suggestion would be to allow 501c organizations to administer the programs either independently and/or in partnership with standing medical cannabis retailers. We are available to answer any questions on how this can be achieved. eastbayhealingalliance@gmail.com

The Compassionate Use Act doesn't exist anymore.

A legal mechanism to enable medicine to be given for free to medical patients without taxation needs to exist.

Thank you for seeking community input toward the creation of a fantastic cannabis marketplace in our shared home of California.

The emergency regulations released in the Fall demonstrate that The State is listening to feedback and adjusting accordingly. The policy which allows for the compassionate exchange of philanthropic goods for medical cannabis patients is particularly encouraging. We still have work to do to ensure that the most vulnerable communities aren't left behind with Prop 64 and that the culture of compassion in California cannabis is restored.

Below are our initial policy recommendations.

Issue temporary emergency licenses for compassion programs pending the (postponed) nonprofit feasibility study deadline of January, 2020

Expand track and trace to include philanthropic exchanges of cannabis goods.

Incentivize philanthropy with tax credits instead of discouraging philanthropy with tax liabilities of "full-market value."

If bicycle delivery is unrealistic then offer no-interest loans to compassion programs to transition to secure vehicle transportation.

Expand equity to include compassion programs.

Expand equity to include military veterans.

Incentivize dispensaries to incubate compassion programs for shared secure storage, tracking, processing, and dispensing.

This would be a great start to creating a pathway to compliance for life-sustaining organizations serving the most vulnerable communities.

In service,
Ryan Miller

Q6 Feedback for Subcommittee

Hello. I am the founder and director of the Sweetleaf Collective. We have been providing free medical cannabis to low income HIV/AIDS and cancer patients since 1996. We serve 150 member patients in the Bay Area.

We currently have a fully permitted supply chain from seed to patient which includes permitted cultivators, transporters/distributors, and dispensaries willing to provide these services to us for free. What is holding us back is the current taxation on donated medicine. We gave away approximately 120 pounds of cannabis last year. To do that this year, we will need to pay $200,000 In taxes. This is not feasible. If we can not provide this medicine to our patients, we are concerned that some of them will die. They are unable to purchase cannabis and have no other access to this life saving medicine.

Here are the specific topics we would like to see addressed by the BCC:

- 0% tax on donated medicine along the entire supply chain.

- tax credits for businesses and individuals donating money and cannabis to compassion programs.

- a new permit category for compassion programs. This permit should be for both stand alone programs as well as programs partnering with a dispensary. We believe compassion programs should have flexibility in determining how they will operate. Some will want their own facility while others will want to operate in a dispensary's permitted facility.

Thank you for your time and I look forward to speaking in Sacramento.

At Doc Green's Healing Collective we have been producing topical cannabis products since 2010. We have seen a great number of people with diverse conditions benefit from these products without any risk associated with the cannabis.

I have two suggestions for the committee regarding topicals.

1. Topical Cannabis products of less than 120mg/ounce concentration pose no greater risk to children than the comparable product without cannabis. The risk for illegitimate use is negligible. Such products should be removed from classification as a cannabis product and not subject to further regulation. They should be permitted to be sold by any licensed California business, and purchased by anyone 18 or over as in Washington State.

2. The requirement for Topical Cannabis products to be in continuous child resistant packaging is:
unnecessary,
wasteful and costly, and makes the products less accessible to the elderly Californians or infirm.

Exempt unpalatable "Topical Cannabis" products of less than 500mg/ounce from the requirement of having child resistant packaging.

We are in process of launching ResponsiTech - a youth safety software and services company. However, the Co-Founders and Staff have over 100 years of experience in youth safety, age verification, age-restricted Ad Buying (see below), and establishing industry Best Practices.

I can't attend the meeting in March since I am already committed to Parent Chat in Hermosa Beach - <https://allevents.in/events/parent-chat-marijuana-legalizations-impact-on-teens/329554920872951>.

Co-Founders

Joan Irvine (Irvine), Co-Founder, brings two decades of online child protection management (Association of Sites Advocating Child Protection - asacp.org) and policy development for high-risk top-level domains (International Foundation for Online Responsibility - iffor.org). She successfully spearheaded the international award-winning Restricted to Adults (RTA) filtering label.

Cannabis Advisory Committee: Subcommittee Input Survey for March 1 Meetings

ASACP is a social welfare non-profit dedicated to improving online child protection through best practices, industry self-regulation, a child abuse reporting hotline, website labeling, and tools for parents. As the first Executive Director, Irvine developed strategic plans that grew ASACP from grass-roots to an international association known for implementing innovative technical solutions. Under her watch, the 'Restricted to Adults' (RTA) website label was recognized by Google, Microsoft, and most parental control filtering systems, and is integrated on over 4 million age-restricted websites. Irvine originated the board and advisory council; established relationships with other organizations, law enforcement, and government agencies; and participated on several committees including the Financial Coalition Against Child Pornography and the Harvard Berkman Center Report on Online Safety. She also spearheaded the advocacy and public affairs in the US, Australia and Europe for online youth safety. In addition, ASACP, under her leadership received the following recognition and awards.

- Honored by the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE) for ASACP Restricted to Adults website filtering mechanism with the 2008 Associations Make a Better World award as the overall Winner in U.S./Developed Nations Category and the 2008 ASAE Associations Advance America Honor Roll.
- US House of Representatives Congressional Commendation from Representative Jane Harman (CA)
- California State Senate Certificate of Recognition.
- California State Assembly Certificate of Recognition
- City of Los Angeles Certificate of Recognition
- City of San Francisco Certificate of Honor
- City of San Diego City Proclamation
- City of Redondo Beach Mayor's Commendation
- Awarded the ASAE Associations Advance America Honor Roll in 2005 for a program in partnership with the Distributed Computing Industry Association that facilitated peer-to-peer (P2P) software users to report child abuse images.

IFFOR is a social welfare non-profit that develops content policies for the internet that are designed to benefit global Internet users and businesses regarding free expression, privacy, security, piracy, and child protection. As the inaugural Executive Director, Irvine established infrastructure and implemented an aggressive plan for regulatory compliance for ICANN and the development of the Ombuds and grant programs. Facilitated a council of international experts that included Nadine Strossen, First Amendment Law Professor at New York Law School and prior President of ACLU; Bob Corn-Revere one of the counsels for the Child Online Protection Act; and Fred Cate, Director of the Indiana University Center for Applied Cybersecurity Research and several industry legal experts. In her role as ED, Irvine successfully

- Managed advocacy efforts for US and EU initiatives; including response to the UK Parliamentary Inquiry into Online Child Protection and mandatory filtering.
- Provided a grant for a white paper on age verification in UK and Germany.
- Participated in the dotHIV Initial Policy Advisory Group in Berlin along with Google, Twitter, and Wikipedia.

Tim Henning, Co-Founder, brings over two decades of experience in international online youth protection, technology and systems knowledge as well as extensive contacts with international governments, law enforcement agencies, and corporations. Tim is ASACP's current Executive Director who joined ASACP in 1996. Tim has performed every function at ASACP during his tenure. Tim created the technology behind the ASACP child exploitation tip line which has made very significant contributions to the fight against child sexual exploitation and child human trafficking over its 21 year history. This tip line was also the first tip line of its kind for the reporting of child pornography, online child sexual exploitation, in the world and served as a model for international tip lines that followed. Tim also supervises the ongoing evolution of its technical infrastructure. A digital forensics expert known for his technical insights, he interacts regularly with law enforcement, government representatives and other child exploitation tip lines internationally.
